Course Description:

Students will examine current issues in education by writing on assigned topics and presenting them to the class in a seminar format. The written portion must be supported by a literature review citing references written correctly using the APA format. Active class participation is a requirement for all. Presenters may use power points, handouts, class activities or any other means (such as original research) to enhance their seminars.

The second portion of the course will address the work done last semester. We will refine and develop the assignment that was completed in C&I 570 turning the work into conference and journal quality research.

Presentations of your research will be made at the regularly scheduled faculty research seminars. It is anticipated that several pieces of work will qualify for regional/national conferences.
